MARKHAM HOLDS HIGH HOPE FOR MILITARY PROBE

Guard Leader Confident Other Whipping Cases to be Brought to Light.

TACKLE BIG CASE

Probe to Follow on Heels of Sentencing of Three Alleged Klansmen.

TULSA, Aug. 24.—Following the confession of three Broken Arrow men last night that they were members of a band of masked Ku Klux Klansmen which last October whipped Ben Wagner and the subsequent sentencing of each of the three to a term of two years in the penitentiary, the military court of inquiry into the floggings in this county today renewed its investigation with unusual vigor.

"We are making excellent progress," adjutant General Markham declared this morning." He was up early to plunge into his task again. "We are going to the bottom of big cases," he promised.

"Will you be able to get to the bottom of these?" he was asked.

"We, we got to the bottom of this one," he answered.

It was indicatd that today might bring another lull in the developments, but that it would only be a lull preceding another storm. Admittedly he was a little piqued over what he considered opposition to his work in some quarters.

'I am over here under orders to go to the bottom of the whippings and I am going about this work squarely and fairly," he said.

In a short discussion over whether or not the patrolling of the streets by guardsmen during the first week of martial law here he said that through this procedure he had come into possession of one of the most important bits of evidence so far picked up and that this justified the order for patrolling. He said he was at work on a new whipping case.

TULSA, Aug 24.—Coming as a sensational climax to the tenth day of Adjt. Gen. Baird H. Markham's investigation of floggings in Tulsa county, Ben F. Sikes, Grover C Sikes and Earl Sack of Broken Arrow, self-confessed members of the Ku Klux Klan pleaded guilty late Thursday night to rioting charges before District Judge W. B. Williams and were sentenced to serve two years each in the state penitentiary at McAlester.

This is the first instance on record in which klansmen have confessed they were members of flogging parties, it is said, and, so far as Tulsa officers know, the first time sentence has ever been passed in the entire country on a klansman for participation in such an offense.

The Sikes brothers and Sack were brought before Acting County Judge Luther Lane and waived their arraignment and preliminary Thirty minutes later they had entered pleas of guilty before District Judge Williams and were sentenced after Ed Crossland, their attorney, and Assistant Attorney General C. W. King, recommended they be given the minimum punishment two years. The maximum is ten years.

Simultaneously in county court A. M. Galloway, W. M. Bills, Avery Barbour, T. V. Venator and W. M. Lewis were arraigned and pleaded not guilty, on information charging them with participation in the flogging to which the Sikes brothers and Sack admitted they were parties—that of Ben Wagner, a German farmer near Broken Arrow. Informations were also filed against Hal Benson, Dick Fisher and Harvey Akers, but they had not been arrested in time to be arraigned with Galloway, Bills, Barbour, Venator and Lewis. The preliminary hearing for these men was set for September 4, and their bonds placed at $1,500.

According to Assistant Attorney Tom Wallace and Attorney Ed Crossland, the three men sentenced Thursday night have signed confessions admitting their own part in the Wagner flogging and implicating those for whom informations were filed Thursday.

The Sikes brothers and Sack will not be taken to the penitentiary immediately, but probably will remain here and be used as witnesses against the others charged in the informations. By court agreement they were turned back to the military authorities by Sheriff Bob Sanford immediately after sentence was passed and for the present are to be kept under military guard at the armory.

Wagner, a slight man about 60 years old, has a wife and eight children. He owns an entire section of land four miles southeast of Broken Arrow.

Bandits Get Haul of Liberty Bonds in Train Holdup

(By the Associated Press)

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 24.—Twenty thousand dollars in Liberty bonds was among the loot obtained by bandits who held up and robbed a Missouri-Kansas-Texas train of registered mail near Okesa, Oklahoma, Monday night, it was announced by Postoffice inspector L. A. Johnson here today.

Mr. Johnson said he understood the bonds were registered. The bandits also obtained about $500 in money. The total amount of the loss is not yet definitely known, Mr. Johnson said, as the check up of packages of the mail taken had not been completed.

POSTPONE START OF COLLEGE TERM

East Central Opening to be Postponed Until September 10.

To conform with the opening date of other state teachers colleges East Central college here will not open its doors to the knowledge seekers from this district until September 10, according to an announcement today from President A. Linscheid of the local institution.

Linscheid stated that the change of opening date from September 4 to September 10 was suggested by State Superintendent M. A. Nash and found hearty approval here.

Presiden Linscheid welcomes the delay in order to permit the completion of repairs on the buildings here and in other ways prepare for the influx of students from over the district.

Indications point to a very large enrollment this fall—a larger inrollment than that of last year is not improbable, and that was by far the biggest in the history of the institution. Several factors make this increased enrolment likely:

Fifteen additional instructors have been added since last September, making it possible to offer a greater variety of courses and to offer them more effectively than ever before. This is especially true in Music, History, Sociology, chemistry, Biology and foreign languages.

Again, the establishment here of a commercial department where students may take shorthand, typewriting, bookkeeping, accounting, commercial law and other commercial subjects, will bring many students. Heretofore students who have sought this work were compelled to go to business colleges where the tuition ranged from fifteen to twenty-five dollars a month. At the Teachers College they will be able to get this work without any other charges than the usual student enterprise and library fees.

The establishment of a junior high school in the training school will also make for an increased enrolment, since it greatly increases the practice teaching facilities for advanced students in education. Incidentally, it may be said that the establishment of the junior high school will prove a great boon to people who live in east Ada, for they can send their pupils to this most modern type of school where they may get not only the usual elementary and high school subjects, but also special training in band, orchestra, vocal music, home economics, manual training, general science, history and foreign languages. This institution is free, students will be admitted there without any charge whatever. Gilman Mackin, who made a reputation on both the Durant and the Ada Teachers College athletic teams will coach athletics in the training school.

And last but not least, the great enrolment and the acknowledged success of the summer term together with the organization of an alumni association will bring many students. The best term in the history of the college is in prospect.

Mine War Requires Co-operation for Needs of Public

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—Stoppage of anthracite mining will create a situation that will require the full co-operation of consumers with soft coal operators and all agencies of distribution together with state and federal commissions according to a statement issued by the federal coal commission.

Chairman John Hays Hammond in a statement said that under existing circumstances he did not feel that the best interests of the public would be served by another attempt on the partof t he commission to intervene in the deadlock.

The striking resemblance of Magnus Johnson, senator-elect from Minnesota, to the late ex-President Teddy Roosevelt is brought out by these photos. Were Teddy to don his campaign hat the resemblance would be more startling. Johnson also assumes many Rooseveltian poses.

BLAKE ANSWERS COUNCIL CHARGE

Counsellor Smilingly Gives Blow for Blow When Leaders Attack.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Aug. 24.—Stepping under blow after blow, bowing before a withering attack but always smiling, Aldrich Blake faced the central labor council for three hours Thursday night, meeting verbal brickbats with lightning jabs, to emerge with the question, "did I down 'em?"

No official decision was given but the bout was a draw in the consensus of observers at the ringside.

J. Luther Langston, George Wilson, Dan Hogan, Ernest Chamberlain, E. S. Hurt, Victor S. Purdy and Glenn Smith sat on the floor with the visitors and delegates, as well as O. E. Heath, Tom Harvey and others listed as friends of the governor.

The executive counselor took the platform under a special invitation and delivered a prepared speech in justification of the Walton administration. He asked his hearers to divorce essentials from non-essentials, and to judge the administration, not by picking out mistakes made by striking a balance between mistakes and achievements.

When he had completed Blake threw down the bars to questions and for two hours he was subjected to a rapid fire of hot sallies from the floor. Glenn Smith led off with a detailed attack on the board of affairs and its attitude toward the union label. Victor Purdy followed, criticising the governor for failing to name a union man on the board. Then Luther Langston shifted the attack and denounced Blake's criticism of the league board.

In reply, Blake urged the delegates to forget personalities and think of the movement and its future. "I know I can't run the farmers and laborers," he explained.

"Why don't you stop trying then?" Langston retorted. "If the league board had not been self-perpetuating, you fellows would have destroyed it long ago."

Blake, in answer, said he believed the council of twelve would handle the affairs of the movement more intelligently than the league had done, and that it would be more representative of the rank and file, admitting that he had said the league had outlived its usefulness and that he had helped prepare the council of twelve manifesto.

VICTIM TO WHIPPING SEEKS SUIT ON K. K. K.

(By the Associated Press)

SHREVEPORT, La., Aug. 24.—A dispatch to the Shreveport Journal from Lufkin, Texas, today said that Mrs. Jessie Wiley of Diboll, Texas, has instituted suit at Lufkin for $100,000 against the Ku Klux Klan.

Angelina Klan No. 16, D. F. Harrell, Sam H. Kerr, Hobby Kelley and B. A. Teston were made defendants.

The petition states that on July 20, 1921, a masked mob of klan members came to her home, took her husband Ben Wiley, beat him into insensibility, covered him with tar and feathers and otherwise disgraced him. It further charges that the klan has persisted in circulating reports against her which damaged her reputation. The petition also alleges that the purpose of the klan is to injure persons' good names, attack their characters and bring them into public scorn by circulating reports concerning all good and worthy people. Ben Wiley, husband of the plaintiff, brought suit against the organization for $100,000.

Arkansas Educator to be Offered New Aggie Presidency

(By the Associated Press)

STILLWATTR, Aug. 24.—Dr. Bradford Knapp, dean of the school of agriculture at the University of Arkansas, has been considered by the state board of agriculture for the presidency of the Oklahoma A. and M. college, according to announcement by John A. Whitehurst, president of the board. Dr. Knapp was motoring from Fayetville to Enid and stopped in Stillwater last night on personal business. Following the breakfast the board held a meeting which later was made executive. It is believed that a decision relative to offering him the presidency will be reached.

The Keltner was one of the largest plants in the Oklahoma-Kansas mining district. It was lately purchased by F. H. Evans, a prominent mine operator of the district.

KINGFISHER NOW STATE SORE SPOT

Governor Intimates Sheriff of County Must Hand in Progress Report.

(By the Associated Press)

OKLAHOMA CITY, Aug. 24.—Gov. J. C. Walton announced today that he has wired a request for a report of the investigation by C. W. Smith, county attorney of Kingfisher county into the whipping three weeks ago of George Elver and warning the county attorney that he "expected some results within a few days."

The following telegram addressed to County Attorney Smith was made public at the executive offices:

"As considerable time has elapsed since the whipping of George Elver at Kingfisher by a mob I would like to know how far the investigation of this matter has progressed. No doubt you have had time to get some information on this subject. I expect some results from you in the next few days."

Asked if there was a possibility that martial law would be declared in Kingfisher county the governor replied:

"There is no telling; I am determined to stop lash rule."

The governor declared there had been a noticeable reduction in the number of reports of whippings reaching his office since Okmulgee county was placed under martial law. He said that only four such outrages had been reported, one of which was the alleged whipping of Nathan Hantaman which precipitated the martial law regime in Tulsa.

The governor declared he had no intention of granting immunity to the three men under sentence in return for their help in apprehending other whippers. He indicated that he believed the military court at Tulsa would be able to get the facts without their assistance and that he intended to let the trio serve their terms.

GOVERNOR GRANTS PAROLE TO DAVE LOCKHART

(By the Associated Press)

OKLAHOMA CITY, Aug. 24.—Reports that the wife of Dave Lockhart, Sequoyah county bank robber, was ill and destitute at St. Joseph, Missouri, with two small children prompted Gov. J. C. Walton to give Lockhart a six months leave of absence from the state penitentiary, it was stated today by Mrs. Nina C. Young, state pardon and parole officer.

Flappers Demand Exposure Program

Silk Stockinged, Bobbed Haired Independents Hurl Defiance at Prim Sisters on "Old Fashioned" Program.

(By the Associated Press)

SOMERSET, Penn., Aug 24.—This little city has been somersaulted into a style class war with the bobbed hair, lip sticked, silk stockinged flappers arrayed on one side and their more timid sisters in long dresses and silkless stockings on the other.

The first clash occurred yesterday when the parent-teacher association formally endorsed the "old fashioned" girl and took steps to petition the school board to adopt a uniform style of dress for all school girls. The rules would bar silk hose, short dresses, bobbed hair and low-necked, sleeveless dresses.

The flapper contingent hearing of the meeting stormed it. Their verbal protest delivered in rhyme was as short and snappy as the dresses and manner of the flappers, who delivered it and was as follows:

"I can show my shoulders,
I can show my knees;
I am a free born American,
I can show what I please."

With that the flappers left and the parent-teacher session was turned into an indignation meeting.

Action on the dress question will be demanded of the school board, the parents and teachers decided.

Jews Killed When Train Breaks Dam in Russian Transit

(By the Associated Press)

WARSAW, Poland, Aug. 24.—(By the Jewish Telegraph Agency)—More than 50 persons were killed and approximately 100 injured when a train from Vilna to Warsaw left the track near Lida and crashed in to a dam yesterday morning.

The impact burst the dam and the ensuing rush of waters helped to swell the casualty list.

The train was filled with passengers, mostly Jews. Among them were a number of immigrants bound for America. A special first aid train dispatched from Lida was held up by a damage to the tracks caused by the flood from the burst dam.

WOMAN NOVELIST DIES IN BRITAIN

Kate Douglas Wiggin Succumbs from Effect of Recent Operation.

(By the Associated Press)

HARROW, Eng., Aug. 24.—Kate Douglas Wiggin, the American novelist, died last night.

The novelist was taken seriously ill on her voyage to England last June. She was taken to a nursing home in Liverpool for treatment. Her condition, however, was not regarded as critical and in a few days word came from the institution that she was able to spend much time out of doors.

Mrs. Wiggin was said to have never fully recovered from the effects of an operation which she underwent shortly after her arrival.

Her husband, George C. Riggs, is understood to be enroute here from the United States.

Kate Douglas Wiggin, often called the "prima donna of literature," was one of the most accomplished women engaged in literary and philanthropic work in the United States.

It was back in 1876 that Mrs. Wiggin, then Kate Douglas Smith, left her home in Maine and journeyed to California for the purpose of studying kindergarten methods. She taught for a year in Santa Barbara Colledge, and was then called upon to organize the Silver Street Kindergarten in San Francisco, the first free school of the kind west of the Rocky Mountains.

Little was known of kindergarten work at the time, but the ideas of Mrs. Wiggin soon began to attract wide attention, and it was not long before she was joined by Mrs. Sarah B. Cooper, the noted educator, who assisted Mrs. Wiggin in forming the California Kindergarten Training School, which established more than 60 schools for poor children in the west.

After her marriage in 1880 to Samuel Bradley Wiggin, a lawyer of San Francisco, Mrs. Wiggin gave up teaching and turned her attention to literature, using the rich material she had gathered in her kindergarten work to weave into stories of greater influence for a wider public.

Her first story, called "Half a Dozen Housekeepers," had appeared in 1878, before she thought of giving up teaching. It was several years later that "The Story of Patsy," and "The Birds' Christmas Carol" were published and met with unexpected success.

In 1888, Mr. and Mrs. Wiggin removed to New York, where she published "A Summer in a Canyon," "Timothy's Quest," and "A Cathedral Courtship," which were translated into several foreign languages, and immediately became popular in Europe.

In addition to her literary ability, both prose and verse, Mrs. Wiggin was an accomplished musician, and composed several melodies for her favorite poems.

Although born in Philadelphia in 1857, the childhood of Mrs. Wiggin was spent in Hollis, Maine, where her father, a lawyer, removed shortly after her birth. She was educated in Abbott Academy, Andover, Mass.

Mrs. Wiggins second husband was George Christopher Riggs, whom she married in 1895, six years after the death of Samuel Wiggin. She continued to reside in New York, spending her summers in Hollis.

In Jun, 1923, Mrs. Wiggin was taken seriously ill in England, where she had gone to attend the Dickens' Fellowship as a delegate from New York.

PARENTS SOUGHT IN CASE OF MURDER OF BRIDE

COLORADO SPRINGS, Aug. 24.—The police of Denver were asked early today by District Attorney W. L. Strachan to find and hold for investigation C. E. Lowe and his wife, step-father and mother, respectively of Mrs. Elsie Jorgensen Suttle, 17-year-old bride of R. H. Suttle, Jr., who was found slain in a bed in her home here shortly before night yesterday.

BARRY HELD NOW ON NEW STATUTE PASSED IN STATE

ARREST HELD UP

Law Enacted in Last Session Places Imprisonment Term as Penalty.

R. L. Barry, alleged driver of the death car that was smashed to destruction and claimed the life of Arch Moore in a collision with a Frisco pasenger train here early Sunday morning, faces the test trial of a new statute on a charge of "driving an automobile on a public highway while in a drunken condition."

The complaint filed against Barry charges that Barry was drunk and under the influence of alcoholic liquor while driving and operating a Dodge car on North Broadway and specifies the location on Broadway at the intersection of Broadway and the St. Louis and San Franciso railroad tracks. The complaint was filed in the name of W. W. Walker, deputy sheriff.

Delay in service of a warrant for his arrest, which was issued August 21, was caused by the uncertain condition of Barry who was injured in the auto wreck last Sunday night. While the warrant for his arrest was issued last Monday, he was not placed under arrest until this morning when the condition of his injuries permitted.

Barry was taken to the county jail and permitted an appearance bond of $2,000, which had not been secured at noon Friday.

No Hearing Date Set

No date has been set for preliminary hearing on the charge in Justice H. J. Brown's court, where charges were filed. Brown stated that Barry would be permitted time to secure the counsel of attorneys in his case.

Barry has been silent on the details of the accident that cost the life of Moore and brought about injuries to himself, refusing to state whether he was the driver of the car or whether Moore piloted the death machine.

Subpoenas have been issued by the state for five witnesses to appear against Barry. Three of the witnesses are expected to deal with startling information concerning the events that led up to the catastrophe. Paul Hensley, Batson Weir and Ronald Combs, alleged occupants of the car until they jumped from the machine a few minutes prior to the accident, will be called upon by the state to reveal valuable information toward the decision in the case. Joe Herrington of Ada, H. E. Wells of Sherman are other state witnesses to be called.

Barry will be tried under a new statute of the session laws of 1923, which makes the driver of a car when in a drunken condition a subject to a maximum of one year imprisonment in the state penitentiary or a fine of $2,000 or both.

The new statute became effective only recently.

Investigation Not Organization Fight, Governor Declares

(By the Associated Press)

OKLAHOMA CITY, Aug. 24.—Gov. J. C. Walton declared today that the military investigation of floggings in Tulsa and Tulsa county was "not directed at any organization," and that the whippers if apprehended would be proceeded against the same "regardless of whether or not they were klansmen."

The governor said he wanted to make it plain that the fact that the three men, who were sentenced last night to terms in the state penitentiary after pleading guilty to rioting, had admitted they were klansmen was not an essential factor of the incident.

"I am after the whippers regardless of who they are," the governor said.

Ross issued a temporary order in United States district court today enjoining the executive board now in control of the Piggly Wiggly corporation from modifying any existing contracts between the corporation, parent of the Piggly Wiggly organization, and the Piggly Wiggly Stores, Inc., which operates a chain of Piggly Wiggly grocery and variety stores under patents held by the corporation.

The Cortlandts of Washington Square

He found a seat for her in the crowded car, and stood beside her, bareheaded, as long as he could, fencing off any one who might have wished to share her seat, and talking of Hendricks when he was a little boy. People looked curiously at the elegant young woman attended by her deferential old servant, but neither Joseph nor his mistress noticed them.

"Good luck, Miss Ann," he said, as the conductor shouted "All aboard." "De Lord be with you, an' Mr. Hendricks."

All night long there were delays and rumors of trouble. Twice they were side-tracked for a train of cavalry—cars filled with shouting men and stamping horses—and once for a load of lowing beef cattle, en route for the Army of the Potomac. Ann could not sleep. After her fellow-passengers had settled themselves into strange grotesques of repose, while the candles in the spring sockets guttered dimly, she sat looking at the full canals of New Jersey, placid and unreal, in the dim light of a waning moon. . . .

Ann knew that she had involved herself in a fine mess, running off in this way. . . . If her guardian had been at home, of course it wouldn't have been necessary. Surely, once Hendricks was found, she could manage to get into a field hospital, if only for a few days. . . . He must be alive—she was sure of it. . . . How overjoyed her guardian would be—and Hendricks' mother, who could lay aside the black which made her look so pathetically old. . . . She wondered if Hendricks had her note yet. . . . She smiled reluctantly at the ridiculous figure she would cut, in her weeds, should he actually face her with it.

She was wide awake when the dawn came; for a long time the blank sky was faintly streaked with mauve, then all at once the whole east burst dramatically into rose color, the sun soared up with a rush of light and movement, and the trees in the fields beside the track flung long black shadows after the escaping train. Ann watched the transformation eagerly. She was not sleepy, and she wondered if Hendricks were miraculously awakening to welcome this new day.

Philadelphia was a vastly different place from the staid town she had known before, when visiting there with her guardian. People thronged the streets, as though it were a holiday, and bands playing martial music promenaded through the crowd, followed by huge canvas signs on which were printed the names of the various regiments which men might join; it was an enormous advertising campaign in the interest of enlistment.

The "Coal Men's Regiment," and the "Union League Brigade" were especially active; it seemed to Ann that their banners hung from every house; that every boarding detailed the advantages they offered. Before the recruiting office at Twelfth and Girard streets, there was such a dense throng of men eager to enlist that she found some difficulty in proceeding on her way to the Sanitary commission rooms. The building was placarded with signs: "The Washington Grays," "Woodward's Light Battery," "Fall In, Men," and an appeal to negro citizens, "Men of Color—come forward." It was like the early days of the war, in New York, only here there was an added tensity because of the nearness of the enemy. All the while, over the hoarse tumult of the crowd, the shrill voices of newsboys could be heard calling: "Confederate cavalry approaches Harrisburg!" And in inarticulate answer Ann saw the men press sullenly forward.

At the Sanitary commission rooms the girl interviewed the lady manageress, but she could learn nothing definite.

"Miss Byrne? Yes? Oh, Mr. Hendricks Cortlandt's niece? . . . Won't you sit down?"

Ann did so reluctantly. "I hate to take the time to," she admitted, smiling ingratiatingly at her interlocutor. "You see—I want to go to the front. Do you know where the Army of the Potomac is?"

"No one knows that, exactly; somewhere in southern Pennsylvania, of course."

"I heard newsboys calling out that Lee has crossed the Potomac."

"Yes. There will be another terrible battle soon. You can see how busy we are, here. The most sensible thing you could do would be to settle down and help us."

"I can't wait," Ann said hastily. "I must get in touch with the army, before the battle."

"But, my child, the front is no place for a young lady. Surely you realize that?"

"But I can nurse!" Ann cried. "I have been working in the hospitals in New York ever since they were opened!"

"Nurse? So young? Extraordinary! In Philadelphia! However, that is neither here nor there. . . . If you can nurse, I dare say we might find you a place on our hospital train; it will start as soon as we get orders."

Ann shook her head. "I can't wait," she said stubbornly.

"You would not be allowed to go beyond Baltimore without a pass from the governor."

"How can I get a pass?"

"You would have to go to Harrisburg for it—and it is a great question if you could succeed in reaching the capital. You know Ewell is raiding in that neighborhood. We fear that at any moment he may cut off the city."

"Well," Ann murmured, regardless of high-bred Philadelphia eyebrows lifted at her expense. "Harrisburg next."

She was rather cast down at the delay, and she was moreover, afraid that Mrs. Cortlandt might succeed in reaching and stopping her. She looked about her for possible aid, and her eyes fell on the only man in the room. He was a young chaplain, gaunt of figure and exalted of face. He was looking at her when she noticed him; his eyes were the sort in which pity lies in ambush; he was a young man born to be gulled.

"I Suppose Not." Ann Drooped Again, Hopelessly.

Ann went over to him at once. "I wish you would help me," she said, trustingly as a little child.

"Anything I can do!" stammered the young man. "Are you in trouble?"

"Yes . . . great trouble." She sighed deeply. "I must get to the front," she said, "and I hear I have to have a pass, to go beyond Baltimore."

"They are hard things to get, these days," he murmured sympathetically, "and only fancy—I have one here that isn't needed."

"You have—a pass?"

He pulled a folded paper from his pocket, and, sure enough, it was a pass. It bore the governor's necessary signature, and it was made out to a Mrs. Edward Blake. When she looked up at him, the young man observed that the girl's gray eyes seemed suddenly black. "Why isn't she—this Mrs. Blake—going?"

"Her son died before she could start."

"Oh, the poor woman! . . . Don't you think it seems a pity to waste it?"

He looked bewildered at this direct attack, so she added smoothly, "Of course I know that the governor would give me one—he is a great friend of my uncle's, you see—but I can't bear to delay. . . . There's going to be this battle. . . . I want to get there before it's fought. . . . I want to find some one. If I could only have this pass!"

"It wouldn't do you any good. It isn't made out to you."

"Would anyone know that?"

"It wouldn't be right," the young clergyman said firmly, but a wave of color swept from his inordinately low collar to his blond hair.

"I suppose not." Ann drooped again, hopelessly.

"I wish I could give it to you."

She turned pleadingly to him, and she laid one beseeching hand upon his arm. "Oh, do give it to me! If you will, I can start for Baltimore at once. Please let me have it—please!"

He looked at the slender white fingers irresolutely. Somehow, his was not an arm upon which beautiful young women often leaned, and he burned to be worthy of this appeal. Ann swept her gray eyes up to his. "You will, won't you?" she said confidently. She held out her other hand, trustfully.

Her evident dependence was too much for him. He put the folded paper in her outstretched fingers, and tingled with a delightful feeling of wickedness. "Of course," he said virtuously. "I shouldn't let you have it, if it were not a case of life and death!"

"No, of course not. . . . I can never thank you—but I'll never forget you! . . . Come on down with me, and help me find my cab."

As she took her seat in the train, Ann observed that there were fewer women traveling that day; the car was filled for the most part with soldiers. They were interested in her, that was quite evident, for she never looked up without meeting a pair of smiling boyish eyes, but she was disposed to be discreetly shy with them, and she struck up a protective acquaintance with a grizzled major who was returning to his regiment with one empty sleeve.

She consulted him about her probable destination. "Where do you think the Army of the Potomac is?" she demanded.

"I am ordered to Frederick City, as the nearest railroad point. I should try to go there, if I were you. It's your best chance for information. You might even run into the Fifty-Fifth. No one knows. You'll have to spend the night in Baltimore."

"The night!" Ann echoed, with a sinking heart. Nights on trains were all very well, but nights in strange cities were more than she had bargained for. "I—don't know anyone there," she faltered childishly.

The major frowned. "I do," he said at length. "I think the woman who runs the Eutaw house would remember me. I was taken there when I lost my arm, and she was very good to me. She'll look after you, I am sure. I'll take you to her."

"Oh, thank you!" murmured Ann. How would the world revolve, she wondered, if it were not for kindly men?

The hostess of the Eutaw house welcomed Ann querulously. "Take you in?" she said doubtfully. "Well, I don't see as I can do anything else. There ain't a mite of room—but I'll have to manage. There's a sofy in my room. I reckon you can have that."

"I shan't sleep anyway," Ann said hastily. Nothing seemed more impossible to her than that.

"That's what they all say," her hostess remarked, with sinister cynicism.

Ann shut her eyes experimentally; she was certain that she could not sleep: when she opened them again the morning sun was streaming into the room, and her hostess was standing over her, urging upon her the necessity of haste, if she were still determined upon her mad idea of catching the train to Frederick City.

She dressed in a bewildered flurry, and protested impatiently as she choked down the hot coffee and cornbread brought her by a weeping darky maid. She had but one thought in her mind—to get to the train before it started, for now added to her wish to find out if it were true that Hendricks lived, was a desire to drink more deeply this exhilarating draught of excitement. She would find out about Hendricks, and then, somewhere, she would find a hospital.

Her drive to the station—dashing through the crowded streets and swinging crazily around corners—was gorgeously exhilarating, and her spirits soared in response. The station was the center of excitement, and the streets leading to it were filled with people; they tossed aimlessly about, regardless of the hot July sun, and shouted and gesticulated. As she drove through the crowd Ann caught scraps of news; the Confederates were concentrating their forces north of the Potomac river, and Harrisburg was in great danger. Here and there she heard execrations of General Lee, but oftener a glimpse of an exultant face betrayed the presence of a secessionist. Little groups of men in blue uniform marched past her, clearing the street as they went, and once an army band swung along at the head of a whole regiment, riving the warm air with the shrill clamor of fifes.

The train stood puffing and ready before the station, and six or eight soldiers hung out of every window, shouting to their fellows on the platform, and waving indiscriminate greetings.

Ann was a Godsend to them; the entire train waved at her, with wild gaiety. She could scarcely make her way through the crowd, and when she finally reached the ticket window the agent hesitated over her request for transportation to Frederick City, but the eloquent plea of her deep mourning, as well as the governor's signature on the pass she mutely offered him, overcame his scruples. When the train started she was sitting in it, surrounded by admiring young soldiers who were joyfully disposed to forget their threatened baptism of fire in the presence of the pretty girl. There was no question, today, of her withdrawing from their attentions; the boys were wildly excited at the prospect of an immediate battle, and Ann was softened by a grim realization that these skylarking youngsters might be among the ill-fated ten thousand for whom sinister preparations were being made; she would not have snubbed them even if she could have done so, which was doubtful. They swarmed about her, firing eager questions at her, and told one another that she was "a plucky one, all right!" Their very numbers made her at ease with them.

The train made poor time; often it backed mysteriously up the track it had so laboriously traversed, while the boys shouted hilariously, "We've changed our minds! We aren't going to fight the Johnnies, after all!"—and sometimes it stopped for long intervals, for no apparent reason. When that happened the soldiers swarmed out along the right of way, shouting and leaping like little boys. One of them brought a stalk of goldenrod back to Ann, and she stuck it in her belt. It made a gay note of color on her black tweeds. She fidgeted uneasily at each new delay, for she was still afraid of being turned back. Even a trainload of forlorn prisoners, caught in a raid and rushing northward, did not distract her for long.

At the Monocacy river three miles from Frederick City, they came to a final halt. The bridge was unsafe, the train men announced, and every one was hurried off the cars into the blinding heat of a late June afternoon. Immediately the officers began collecting their men in some sort of order; as Ann stood, bewildered, waiting for events to shape her next move, she saw the advance column march off down the rutted, dusty road.

As she stood somewhat forlornly a young captain came hurrying up to her. "Where are you going?" he asked, curtly.

"To Frederick City," Ann replied, turning wide and confident eyes upon him. "I am trying to find Captain Renneslyer. He was with the Fifty-fifth New York. Do you know where that regiment is?"

"No—and you can't go wandering around this country. There's likely to be a battle almost anywhere, any time. The best thing you can do is to go back to Baltimore."

"I wouldn't think of doing that," Ann protested.

"Sorry," he said, "but back you go. Get right into this train again—the one you came down in. It will be leaving in a few minutes."

"I won't do anything of the kind," Ann declared furiously.

The officer laughed. "I'm in command here," he reminded her. "It's an order."

To escape further humiliation Ann went into the car and sat down. She was vehemently angry, but quite impotent. Presently a covered black wagon drove up to the train, and a crooked old driver climbed laboriously down to open the door in the rear. Ann watched him curiously: there was nothing else for her to do. A bevy of young women swarmed surprisingly out of the wagon; it was incredible that it could have held so many hoopskirts, and so many agitated and fluttering girls. A calm nun followed them, prim and self-contained and hot, in her coif and black habit; while her flock boarded the train she stopped to speak to the driver. The girls came trooping into Ann's car, chattering excitedly.

"Where are you all from?" Ann demanded.

"The Convent school at Emmitsburg. We all live in the North, and the mother superior is sending us home just because she thinks there may be a battle around here somewhere. Isn't it mean?"

The other girl interrupted eagerly, "There were soldiers in the convent grounds this morning," she declared, round-eyed. "They gave their horses a drink, and the mother superior sent milk out to the men."

"What regiment?" Ann asked in idle curiosity.

"The Fifty-fifth New York."

Ann shot to her feet. "I'm going!" she declared hotly.

"Going where?"

"To find the Fifty-fifth!"

"She has a lover in it!" one of the girls whispered romantically.

Stooping, Ann reconnoitered. The nun had turned toward the train, and the old driver was beginning to climb to his high seat. Ann swung herself into the aisle. . . . At the door she almost ran down the placid nun. . . . On the step she halted. The bus was beginning to move off, in a leisurely and inviting fashion. The train made a convulsive start, and Ann leaped to the ground. The door in the end of the departing bus had swung open with a jolt of its first motion; there was dark sanctuary within. She sprang after it. The horses were barely started; she caught up easily, and grasping the handrail in the rear, she bolted into the dusty hot interior of the covered wagon. She settled herself deliberately in the most comfortable corner, and marveled at the ease of her escape.

It was a forlorn way they traveled, for the fences had been torn from before the houses, to be used for fuel, and the straggling gardens had been trampled by careless hundreds.

Ann wondered uneasily what her reception might be at the convent. Suddenly the bus ceased lurching and groaning, and ran smoothly over a good road. Ann looked out; her unconscious driver had turned in between iron gates, and was taking her down a well-kept driveway. She stood up and peered through a tiny peephole in the front. All that she could see was the austere black outline of a cross, high against the angry sky. In a moment they had arrived before a high front stoop, and stopped.

A woman's voice asked, "Any mail, David?"

"No, Sister."

"Did you bring anything back with you?"

"No, Sister."

The bus vibrated uneasily, as the tired horses gathered themselves together for a last effort, which should carry them to the barn. Ann knew that the moment of revealment had come, and she reluctantly poked her abashed face out of the door. "Yes, he did," she said falteringly. "He brought me."

On the top of the high steps was a pretty nun; under her white coif her face looked extraordinarily young and childlike. Her eyes met Ann's with an unmistakable sparkle of amusement. "Did you get in without David's knowing it?" she demanded.

Ann nodded, and ran up the steps. "I had to come," she said, "I am looking for an officer—Captain Renneslyer."

The nun nodded in her turn. "Come in," she said, slipping her arm through the newcomer's, "and tell the Mother Superior all about it."

Ann's heart sank, but when she was face to face with the wise and kindly head of the convent school she found little difficulty in telling her story, and she thankfully agreed to stop for the night.

FOWLER TO LEAD FIGHT ON REDS

Legion to Follow Out Monk's Lead in Dealing With State Radicals.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Aug. 24.—The state department of the American Legion, now under the leadership of Cody Fowler, Oklahoma City attorney, following the annual convention this week at Lawton, plans as its first step to regain strength within its own ranks and then seek to increase its membership.

"Legion members in this state will take Americanism in all its various phases as a watchword for the coming year," Commander Fowler says. "The American Legion is here to stay. Its stability and character have undergone the trials of five years and the organization has survived on a scale unparalleled by any other veterans body."

"It is very necessary," Fowler continued, "that the legion membership be built up to a point where the people realize that the legion is truly the spokesman for the former service man and that the voice of the legion may have the strength due it to accomplish its objective.

"The American Legion will continue to oppose reds, bolchevists, I. W. W.s and communists and will meet them with any weapons they may choose from bayonets to ballots."

Asked if the legion would take active part in efforts to suppress mob whippings in the state as part of its program for the coming year, Commander Fowler asserted that flogging investigations in Oklahoma at present assumed somewhat of a political aspect and that the legion held aloof from politics.

Membership ranks have shown a decrease in recent months, Fowler said, largely because of the situation in smaller towns and in rural sections. Farmer members of the legion, in numerous instances, the new commander said, have not met their membership assessments and have, therefore been placed on the delinquent list. The legion's first active work will be to list again these men on the roles of the various posts. A campaign for new members will follow, it is planned.

The new commander was born in Arlington, Tennesse, in 1890, the grandson of a Confederate veteran. He entered the second officers training camp at Leon Springs, Texas, at the beginning of the world war and was made a first lieutenant in the artillery. Later he was instructed at the third camp and served at Camp Jackson and Camp Zachary Taylor. He was mustered out at Camp Lewis as commander of A Battery, 37th field artillery, 12th division. He is now a member of the reserves.

VISAS BIG ITEM ON TOURISTS BILL

Exorbitant Prices Assessed Tourists for Passports In Foreign Countries

(By the Associated Press)

LONDON, Aug. 21.—American tourists in Europe have learned to their dismay that if they are to see anything of the principal countries, the cost of passport visas nearly equals the fare across the Atlantic. Their passport charges range from $50 to $250, depending upon the number of national boundary lines crossed.

Most of the European nations charge $10 for a visa, in retaliation for the action of the United States in making a similar assessment upon foreigners. Indeed, some of the continental states, notably the Balkans, have in occasional instances imposed fees of from $15 to $30 for the simple rubber stamp visa that permits the traveller to pass through the country.

Reginald Kauffman, a business man of Brooklyn reported, being recently charged $60 at the border of Jugo-Slavia for a visa entitling him to cross that country into Kumania. When he protested the Serbian authorities threatened to eject him from the train. Mr. Kauffman said he was calling the situation to the attention of the state department at Washington. It cost him $400 for visas in the course of his six weeks tour of Europe.

Switzerland, Belgium, Holland Norway, Sweden and Denmark are among the few countries that are an exception to the general practice. These nations either make no charge whatever to the American tourists, or only levy a nominal one.

ONCE LUXURIANT CRIMEA NOW POOR

Pleasant Summer Resort of Russia in Past Now in Hopeless Waste.

(By the Associated Press)

ALUSHTA, Crimea.—The Crimea the beloved health resort of the old days and known as the "Russian Riviera," once filled with beautiful palaces surrounded by flowers, vineyards and magnificent fruit gardens, lies now flowerless and ruined as a result of the civil war and last year's famine.

Many of the owners of these villas, vineyards and fruit gardens belonged to the upper classes and lived in central Russia, coming here for their relaxation. Large numbers fled the country years ago, while others, having thrown in their lot with General Wrangel became the scapegoats of his acts after his defeat and paid the death penalty during the terror which followed the second occupation of the Crimea by the Bolsheviks.

The Crimea has not escaped the effects of nationalization, confiscation and requisitions, and while nominally the immense vineyards and magnificent gardens have been declared nationalized, as a matter of fact they are nobody's property. Vineyards and gardens stood unguarded for several years, with the result that everything went to the dogs. The wine-stocks dried, and a majority of the best fruit trees died. Thousands of acres of almond apricot, peach and pear trees and vineyards are today absolutely worthless, and many a year will have to pass before they can be brought to life again.

The same is true of agriculture and industry. Despite the reconstruction work carried on by the Crimean "Independent" Soviet government, Crimean agriculture and existing minor industries are in a deplorable condition. The number of cattle has diminished by 75 percent, the total number of working horses being today only 30,000. The sowing area is only 40 percent that of 1916. This year's harvest will be very small.

Industries in the Crimea are insignificant and play an unimportant part in the economic life. They consist largely of the curing of tobacco, tanning and preserving. They all languish. There is no market for the local salt, and Crimean wines go begging. The people are impoverished and seem content to live with insufficient food, no comforts or pleasures, and with little hope for the future.

Egypt Usese Japanese Tobacco

(By the Associated Press)

TOKIO.—Japanese tobacco of inferior quality is being sent from Japan to Egypt in increasing quantities, blended there, brought back as "Egyptian" cigarettes and sold by the Japanese tobacco monopoly at high prices.

In 1922, according to the Japan Economist, approximately 1,168,000 bales of this tobacco were thus treated and the amount will be exceeded this year.

ROBERTSON HERE TO BEAT COOPER

Chicago Fighter on Labor Day Card to Oppose Ada Champion.

Harry Robertson, youthful mit artist of Chicago, will fling the wicked mit here Labor Day against the onslaught of Archie Cooper, local fighter and state middleweight champion, according to the announcement of A. R. Dixon, Cooper's manager.

The Cooper-Robertson match will be the culminating episode of thirty rounds of fighting here on the annual Labor Day fighting exposition.

Manager Dixon declares that the opposition of Robertson for the main go has been secured with considerable costs in order that the Ada champion could be properly matched for the big fight card of the season. Dixon indicates that a score of promising fighters could have been secured for the fray here but their record would not warrant a match with the Ada champion.

Cooper's last fight with Micky King at Oklahoma City, in which Cooper gained a technical knockout in the fourth round of their scheduled ten-round bout, sounded the end of preliminary fighting for Cooper.

The fight card under the direction of the Ada Athletic club will be the feature card of the season. A total of 30 rounds of fistic turmoil will be unraveled for the occasion. A grudge bout between two prominent super-heavies is on the card as well as other preliminary matches.

Christian Church Notes

We will have our regular services at the church both Sunday morning and evening. This nice cool weather should bring every member out to the church. The barometer should not be an index to our religion. The love that we have for the church is measured by service.

All men who are not in Bible school are urged to attend the class at the chamber of Commerce room and hear Dr. Linscheid explain the lesson.

Let us all come out Sunday morning to the Bible school and help make it the largest for the month. We will fall down if you do not do your part.

We will preach at the morning hour from the text, "Lovest Thou Me?" John 21:16. This is a theme that should be of vital interest to all Christians. Do not miss it.

At the evening service, following the special program which has been arranged, we will preach on the theme, "Warning Against Shipwreck," from the text I Timothy 1:19: This is universal warning and should be investigated by all. Be sure and attend these services. The public is always welcome at this church.

Matters of interest regarding our revival will be discussed Sunday. All members should be present

Want Decision on Fiume

(By the Associated Press)

ROME, Aug. 24.—The Italian government has sent an ultimatum to Jugo-Slavia asking that a definite decision be reached regarding the status of Fiume. It is alleged here that the government at Belgrade is constantly delaying a settlement of the situation.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

THE GOODNESS OF GOD:—Thou openest thine hand, and satisfiest the desire of every living thing. Psalm 145:16.

DON'T BEAR FALSE WITNESS

One of the commandments of the Bible is that "we shall not bear false witness." We heard a gentleman say the other day that this commandment was broken more frequently in Oklahoma than any place he had ever visited. He did not mean that more people go into court and swear falsely, but that more fellows in Oklahoma apparently knock their neighbors and their fellow-townsmen, than they do elsewhere. We do not quite agree with his statement, and yet we do believe that otherwise good men, break the commandments daily by repeating uncomplienmtary things which they have heard about their fellow citizens and of the truth of which they are wholly ignorant. One of the worst habits along this line usually crops out when there is to be some public improvement or public service, and you will hear this or that man comment upon the time or energy some citizen is spending in the public service, with the question, "I wonder what he is getting out of it?"

Such expressions as these not only indicate thoughtlessness and a total disregard for the good name of other people, but they are positive violations of the commandments, and it is the worst sort of false witnessing. Criticism, if in the proper spirit and based upon known facts, ought to be helpful, but criticism based upon street gossip and speculation, is the most vicious sort of thing. We think highway robbery is just as gentle pastime when compared with character assassination indulged in by men who talk without knowing their facts.—Okmulgee Democrat.

"If you think Germany is being treated harshly in the amount of reparations assessed against her, you can show your sympathy by giving France credit on her war debt to you and the German reparations payments will be reduced by the same amount." Such is the substance of France's latest note to Great Britain and incidentally to the other allies. Several nations have suggested that France is demanding too much from Germany but it is not likely that many of them will take very enthusiastically to France's proposal. France owes Great Britain and the United States quite a few billions of dollars but it is highly improbable that either will feel inclined to wipe the debts from the books just to help Germany out of a hole.

Campbell Russell refuses to be put out by the failure to secure sufficient signatures on his initiated constitutional amendment taking the pardon and parole power out of the hands of the governor and creating a board for the purpose of passing on these matters. He announces his purpose to start again and have it ready for next year's elections. Whatever one's opinion of Russell may be his worst enemy will admit that he is no quitter.

—o—

Secretary Mellon's suggestion that the surtaxes on big incomes be reduced so that the big fellows will not seek to evade it by investing in tax-exempt securities instead of putting it into productive enterprises strikes us as striking at the symptoms rather than the disease. Why not put an end o tax free securities and thus remove the temptation of tying up capital in them instead of catering to the tax dodgers by making it easier on them?

—o—

The French have seized another batch of German paper money reported to be around seventy-five billion marks. Sounds big on paper but in good old U. S. A. coin it is worth only about $50,000. However, it will mean more employment for the printers who will have to work a little extra time to print enough new money to replace what the French grabbed.

The Antlers American finds some amusement in the prevailing term of a person "accepting" a position, pointing out that it is generally a case of the employer accepting the services of an eager applicant who needs the job badly and seeks it.

Harry L. Kent, president of the A. and M. Kent of New Mexico, has declined the presidency of the Oklahoma A. and M. College, saying there is too much politics in the Oklahoma job. It will take this state a long time to live down the effects of the recent row in this school.

—o—

Will those living half a century hence look back on these times and tell the younger generation about the good old days of 1923?

Whatever his future course may be President Coolidge is certainly not starting out with a lot of talk that might prove embarassing to him down the line.

Curbing Mob Violence.

(The Daily Oklahoman)

Mob law has never developed a civilization; mob violence destroys civilizations. Mob rule inevitably weakens goverament. A state that cannot curb mob violence is destined to die because of mob violence.

But mob activities can never be terminated by attacking mob symptoms. Unless the knife is laid to the source of the evil and that evil removed, mobs will continue to organize and mob violence continue to distress the state. Oklahoma can never suppress this civil manifestation by hunting down mob participants while ignoring the causes in which mob violence has its genesis.

Hence the relief afforded by military rule is only transient. A single community may be purged of these restless spirits, but if the cause that produced the manifestation is left alive, mobs will inevitably appear in a dozen other communities. A military mobilization is nothing but an irritant when the mob spirit born of intolerable conditions prevails throughout the state. We must remove the cause if we effect a permanent cure, and the cure must be effected if law and order are to survive.

Mobs are not organized in a moment of passion. They are born of causes that endure from year to year. They are demanded by a people who have lost all faith in the orderly processes of government and who doubt the ability of courts and government to suppress the vicious elements and the criminally inclined.

Today we merely reap the whirlwind in Oklahoma; the wind has been sowing for years. We would not be reaping this crop of dragon's teeth if we had not sown the wind with lavish hands.

If our constituted authorities covet law and order let them encourage law and order by practicing law and order. Let the governor of this commonwealth announce to the people of Oklahoma that if one commits a brutal murder, the sentence of the court shall be carried out and that the electric chair is at the end of the trail.

Let the governor of Oklahoma serve notice on the criminal element that if one is adjudged guilty of a felony, he shall serve his term in the penitentiary to the very last hour. Let the governor convince the public that no matter how rich a convict may be, no matter how influenital his friends may be, he will stay in a prison cell just as long as a jury has adjudged he should stay.

Let the governor serve notice on the county and city officials of the state that unless they enforce the laws religiously, thoroughly, fearlessly, that every power of the state will be invoked to secure their immediate removal from office.

Let the courts of the state discard the legal circumlocutions and apply themselves to the sacred task of giving every offender an immediate and just trial.

Let citizens of the state accept jury service as one of the citizen's most sacred duties and show themselves ready at all times to help dispense justice and equity to all offenders and all litigants.

Let these things be done and the mob spirit will at once and forever disappear from Oklahoma.

It is to no purpose to denounce mob violence after mobs are already formed. It is to no purpose to attribute all mob depredations to the Ku Klux Klan. If the people of Oklahoma had confidence in their officers and their courts, the mob spirit never would have developed. If the confidence had prevailed throughout the state, it is probable that the Ku Klux Klan never would have organized.

This lamentable condition is the product of lack of confidence. Let that confidence be restored, and the evil will disappear. But it is the babble of fools to condemn the evil while ignoring the source of the evil and permitting it to continue unchallenged.

When Farmers Know Each Other

(Farm & Ranch)

In nearly every city in the country business men have organized themselves into luncheon clubs under various names. The larger the city, the more organizations there are, and at least once each week these men get together at some hotel and enjoy an hour of social intercourse. Very seldom do they discuss business. Occasionally some speaker is secured who will talk on some phase of business.

Why these weekly dinners? Because, in the hurry of city life men become absorbed in their own affairs and develop along narrow lines. They have discovered that many close friendships are made in these club affairs; they learn to see the other fellow's point of view; Their perspective is broadened. Weekly luncheon clubs are an asset to any city and to every member.

The casual reader may think it strange that city men need places to assemble to make friends and keep from getting lonesome, but it is true nevertheless, and the city businss man fully rcognizes that fact. They have taken the lead in a movement which is spreading into the country and when farmers fully appreciate the value of community organiaztions, there will be less lonesomeness in the country and better business methods employed. Farmers and their families need to get together in community meetings much more often than they do. Organizing communities for any purpose, and especially the bringing together of boys and girls in clubs, is a most worthy work. It means more to future generations than can be well estimated at this time. Because neighbors are from a quarter of a mile to a mile distant is no reason why the farmer and his family should lead a self centered existence. There is all the more need for some community organization and a get-to-gether meeting place. Let us encourage community- organiaztions.

COURAGEOUS RESCUE IS MADE BY MARINE TROOPS

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti.—The initiative and courage of two privates of the Marine Corps saved the lives recently of 14 Hawaiian prisoners who were trapped in a blazing prison in the village of Croix des Bouquets. Official commendation of the two men in question, Melvin J. B. Griggs of Cincinnati, Ohio, and Russell M. Anderson of Ellsville, Mississippi, was forwarded to the navy department by Brig. Gen. John H. Russell, the American high commissioner to Haiti, and by their brigade commander, Col. Theodore P. Kane.

The prison at Croix des Bouquets is constructed of heavy cement walls covered with a thatched roof. A spark from the prison kitchen ignited the roof, and the guards were successful in liberating the women prisoners. In the endeavor to release the fourteen men confined in separate quarters the key became jammed in the lock, and efforts to break the lock with a stone by the native guards were unavailing.

Griggs and Anderson, riding in the vicinity, were attracted by the blaze and rushed to the spot. While Haitians dashed water against the blazing prison, the Americans broke through the wall of fire that blocked the prison door, and smashed the lock with an iron bar. They then entered the prison and dragged the half-suffocated prisoners to safety. Both men were slightly burned while risking their lives.

AMERICANS SUBJECT TO GERMAN MONEY TRAILS

(By the Associated Press)

BERLIN, Aug. 23.—The American embassy had the appearance of a special session of congress during the last week. Senators Ashhurst of Arizona, Robinson of Arkansas, McKellar of Tennessee, Swanson of Virginia, former Senator Frelinghuysen of New Jersey, congressman Raker of California, Roland Morris, former ambassador to Japan, and other prominent Americans, many of whom were enroute to Copenhagen to attend the meeting of the Interparliamentary Union, called on Ambassador Houghton whom they all knew when he was a congressman.

These distinguished visitors shared with less known Americans the general confusion caused by the money shortage and joined the lines trying to get cash at the various banks.

Bank notes for fifty million marks is practically the only currency available, and as nobody could change these many tourists had to open bank accounts and issue their personal checks to pay hotel zills and buy railroad tickets. Many tourists are stranded in the resorts from the Baltic Sea to the Bavarian highlands, being unable to travel because they can't raise money on their letters of credit.

The situation is similar to that existing when war was declared and many Americans caught in the swirl were unable to realize on their travellers checks or letters of credit. Gold alone was good then but now gold isn't in demand and it is impossible to exchange the large denomination American or English bills for marks, or even to get them changed into small dollar or pound notes.

RAINS AID CORN CROP FOR STATE

While Coming Too Late for Sections, Rain to Revive Crop.

(By the Associated Press)

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Aug. 23.—While arriving too late to benefit most of the corn crop, rainfall this week extended over a fairly general portion of the entire state and corn planted in the lowlands "will receive added vitality" according to John A. Whitehurst, president of the state board of agriculture, in a statement summarizing crop conditions.

Larger corn yields may be expected, Whitehurst says, than if the moisture had been delayed longer. The condition on August 1, he says, was reported 55 percent normal.

Whitehurst's crop notes follow in part.

"Cotton will take a new lease on life and again improve its condition. Shedding is not expected to be much heavier than it has already been. There is no immediate danger expected from boll weevil, but if the cool damp weather continues for any lengthy period, the late crop will no doubt experience some injury. The condition of the cotton crop reported on July 25 was 63 percent of normal. However, since the report was released, Oklahoma has had two weeks of very hot days and nights.

"Kafirs are receiving the greatest value from the rain. Blades were beginning to roll and the crop was ingrave danger of failing before this recent precipitation. These crops are no maturing in practically all sections. The condition of the kafir crops on August 1 was reported as 70 percent of normal.

"In the northwest, the rain will aid in finally maturing the broom corn crop. Threshing and bailing has been rushed in the west central and Lindsay district. Prevailing prices at Lindsay were about $180 to $210. Calls have been issued this week for broom corn pullers in the northwest district.

"Pastures being rejuvenated will be of great value to the cattle industry. Plowing will now be resumed and rushed to completion. Possibly one-half of the amount to be done has been completed to date, however, the most of this that has been finished was reported as being disced.

AMAZED THIEF THANKED FOR RESTORING VOICE

(By the Associated Press)

PARIS.—In a secluded spot just outside the walls of Paris there stands a small and select infirmary where diseases of the throat are treated. Patients suffering from chronic laryingitis go there for medical attention.

The attention of the police was called recently to a series of daylight hold-ups occurring in the vicinity of the sanatorium. It seems that ingenious crooks watched prosperous looking visitors enter the institution, noted the worst cases—those so unable to utter a sound that they had to make signs to the doorman—and then set upon them when they left and robbed them of their money and valuables.

One of the stick-up men received the shock of his life the other day, when an intended victim, upon being attacked, suddenly shouted "Help, Thief!" in a voice which would have been a credit to a side-show barker. Fear had brought back the sick man's voice. "You have cured me," he said to the crook, "it's ten years since I have been able to shout like that. Here is a hundred francs; I would much rather give this to you than go on paying doctors."

It is now time to think of trees for the orchard. Experience has convinced me that fall planting is best. The ground has time to settle thoroughly before the leaves begin to appear and the tree is firmly in place before the sap begins to rise. The tree thus planted is in better shape to stand the dry weather that is pretty certain to come the next summer and this means a much better chance of its living. The same thing applies to shade trees.

The day after the rain my better half handed me a spade and a hoe and gave orders for some fall garden. We had very little unoccupied space but part of this went to turnips and the rest for chicken pasture. With a mixture of wheat and rye we expect to have plenty of green stuff for the chickens most of the winter. Very likely a lot of the turnip tops will also be fed to the chickens, for it is out of the question to expect eggs unless the chickens have a good supply of green stuff summer and winter alike. It costs quite a bit to feed chickens in town where everything must be bought, but our flock have paid their way this year and left a very nice margin of profit. The dry mash, scratch feed, charcoal, tankage and oyster shell foot up several dollars in a month's time, but the eggs have more than paid for this feed leaving us with the chickens as clear profit. It is just a matter of care that makes chickens pay.

Army worms are doing considerable damage to cotton in some places and Agent Hill gives the following recipe for poisoning them if they show up in Pontotoc county:

One part Paris green, five parts air slacked lime. Mix well and dust from sacks tied on a pole and carried on a mule or horse. About six pounds of the mixture will be required for an acre of cotton.

When to Grind Kafir.

Much has been said for and against the advisability of grinding kafir for hogs in the fattening pen. A lot of hogs weighing an average of 82 pounds were fed whole kafir and one-fourth pound of tankage at the Kansas experiment station for 82 days and made an average daily gain of .63 pounds. A lot of hogs, weighing an average of 84 pounds each were fed ground kafir and one-fourth pound tankage for 82 days and made an average daily gain of .63 pounds. A required 20 percent, or one-fifth, more kafir to make 100 pounds gain on whole kafir than if the kafir were ground. Which seems to offer a means for finding out if it will pay to go to the expense of grinding kafir for hogs.

If the cost of grinding a bushel of kafir amounts to less than one-fifth the cost of the bushel of kafir, the expense of grinding will pay for itself and more, too. But if kafir is very cheap and the cost of grinding would amount to more than one-fifth the value of the kafir the chances are that the cost of grinding will not be recovered in increased feeding value of the kafir. One can afford to feed more kafir and keep the hogs in the fattening pen longer, rather than pay for the grinding expense, under such conditions.—Ex.

Notes of Special Interest to Women

Women are wearing more hair than ever before. Sounds odd, doesn't it, with all the bobbing still going on, although fashion writers insist that bobbed hair is passe. Statistics show that in 1921 the value of hair goods manufactured in this country amounted to almost $11,000,000 as compared with $3,335,000 in 1914.

A Tip to the President

Without a dissenting vote, delegates to the convetion of the General federation of women's Clubs at Atlanta adopted a resolution endorsing the principle of the world court.

A siginificant action was taken before the vote. The text of the resolution was changed, and a specific endorsement of President Harding's proposal was stricken out. As adopted, it endorses "all practical measures tending to the end" that all wars should cease and international friction give way to understanding.

Claims of Denmark on Greenland's Shores Now Contested By Norwegians

(By the Associated Press)

COPENHAGEN, Aug. 24.—Denmark thought its title to Green land was without blemish after the United States agreed to waive all claims to the Arctic island as part of the consideration in the purchase of the Danish West indies. But the interest of Norway in the land which "Eric the Red" discovered has suddenly revived after centuries of inactivity. The controversy between the two Scandinavian countries over the ownership of the east coast of Greenland has become so acute that Denmark now has a commission, headed by former Miniser Th. Zahle, traveling over the Arctic island for the purpose of making a report upon which negotiations with Norway may be based.

Many Danes think Norway is opposing Denmark merely for the purpose of holding its claims upon Greenland as a club which can be used in forcing better terms out of Denmark in a new commercial treaty which is to be negotiated inthe near future. The chief argument used by Norway is that its fisheries might be affected adversely by recognizing Danish sovereignty over the eastern coast of Greenland.

There are only about 12,000 inhabitants in Greenland, and of these only about 300 are Europeans, mostly Danes. The island is chiefly famous as a leaping off place for explorers in search of the North Pale and as the source of icebergs which imperil shipping on the North Atlantic courses. Its trade is a monopoly of the Danish state, which enforces prohibition. The total import and export trade of Greenland is only slightly more than $1,000,000 a year, and has declined since fish fats of various are in less demand.

Norwegian claims upon Greenland date from the explorations of "Eric the Red" and Leif Ericson in the eleventh century, when the latter of these intrepid Norsemen is supposed to have discovered the American mainland. In the fiftenth century Norway abandoned all communications with Greenland, and late in the Eighteenth century Denmark began commercial relations with the island and established its colony there.

Denmark's colony before 1921 was only about the size of New York state, but the entire island over which it now is asserting its control is sixteen times larger. The season is so short in summer that even the small amount of tillable land near the coast can produce only potatoes and other vegetables which do not require much heat.

"SKID PROOF" PICTURE OF MANIFOLD THRILLS

Charles Jones, as Madcap Automobile Racer, introduces Danger in Some New Forms

Of interesting note in "Skid Proof", the latest William Fox production, starring Charles Jones, is the varied presentation of courage. It has been the common practise in pictures assaying to thrill, to offer the hero as a sort of super steeple-jack in monkey-like agility and tiger-like intrepidity. In these pictures, all attempting to display the limits of human endurance and human villainy, it happens infrequently that mental forms of bravery are introduced.

Charles Jones, however, insists on running the gamut of all genre of travail in his pictures. Particularly in "Skid Proof" does his predilection come to light. Manager Cobb of the American theatre announces the engagement of this picture for Friday.

As Jack Darwin, the irresistible racing madcap, Mr. Jones encounters death in a multitude of forms and phases He dashes along the groups, sweeps in the air, all against sickening odds. He renounces a brilliant future as a movie actor because of his love for Nadine, a role beautifully interpreted by Luran Anson. His luck is of the blackest dye; his money given out. He is tempted with a bribe—a great sum of money is offered in exchange for his honor. Such are the mental expressions demanded of Charles Jones in "Skid Proof."

Practically all taxicab calls in Europe are by persons hailing machines from the surb, in the U. S. 90 percent are by telephone.

EXPLAIN REASON FOR JOB LOSSES

Chicago Woman Member of Five Reasons for Loss of Jobs.

(By the Associated Press)

CHICAGO, Aug. 24.—Lack of a sense of responsibility, unwillingness to work hard, lack of thoroughness, false notions about salary and promotion, and lack of principle are the five chief reasons why 90 percent of the boys and girls of the United States lose their first jobs, according to a report made to the Chicago Association of Commerce by A. D. White, statistician of Swift and Company.

Mr. White's report noted that 90 percent of the boys and girls lose their first positions. The report also shows that in nine cases out of every ten, the loss of the position can be traced to one of the five reasons noted

His report continues:

"Lack of a sense of responsibility is shown by neglect of work, failure to put the most important things first, and the expression of a general 'I should worry' attitude.

"Unwillingness to work hard, is shown by being late to work, stretching the lunch hour, and stealing a few minutes at the end of the day, watching the clock, and wasting the time by social conversations and telephone calls during business hours.

"Lack of thoroughness, is indicated most frequently by unwillingness to begin at the bottom and to go through the drudgery of mastering each step before going ahead.

"The real secret of promotion lies in constantly doing more than you are paid to do. Keep yourself underpaid. As soon as you are overpaid you are bound to go backward.

"Lack of principle is shown by concealment of mistakes, untruthfulness and the constant making of excuses."

National Search Started for Babe Missing in Gotham

(By the Associated Press)

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—The police of 9,000 cities and towns in the United States and Canada were requested in police circulars broad cast today to aid in the search for three-months-old Lillian McKenzie, who was kidnaped from her perambulator on a Manhattan street last Saturday.

The frantic mother who yesterday was ordered to bed under a physician's care called fervently for some news of her missing babe. She feil into a semi-conscious coma after relatives had found her in a lone search through the streets for the child.

The empty baby carriage from which the child was stolen was placed in the same position today that it occupied at the time of the kidnaping in a mute plea for the return of the babe.

MOVIES SEEKING CENSOR FREEDOM

Chicago Women Member of Censor Board Declares Need to Vanish.

(By the Associated Press)

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.—Another ten years will see the passing of the movie censor, declares Mrs. A. L. Adams, chairman of the Chicago board of motion picture censorship who says the present day star need little supervision in their art.

"It will not be long until such supervision is entirely superfluous." Mrs. Adams asserts. "Directors do not want to offend the public, and they have learned that the public wants clean pictures. Censors, however, can make few hard and fast rules. They have to judge each picture individually.

"Censorship, like the movies themselves, is undergoing an evolution. But it cannot be abolished for some time yet because people sometimes read into a picture what is not there."

There are some rules, Mrs. Adams says which she always observes. In a fistic encounter, hitting a man when he is down is taboo because it is unsportsmanlike. A crook cannot shoot at an officer pursuing him lest that encourage lawlessness. Single piece bathing suits are all right, but a bathing beauty is not permitted to parade across many feet of screen.

"Virtue does not need to triumph over all difficulties, but pictures glorifying unscrupulous dealings are cut." Mrs. Adams continues. "Shooting, too, is censored closely. In this respect it is believed that the movie director is improving.

"We cannot make hard and fast rules about very many things because of great deal depends on how the subject is handled," adds Mrs. Adams, "and because public morals also undergo changes. Every day we get objections from somebody who has been scandalized by a picture. Generally, however, we find on examination that these people have read something into the picture that is not there."

EVERDYBOY WORKED BUT FATHER

"Father's stomach trouble seemed to be getting worse all the time and finally he had to quit work altogether. Two brothers and myself gave up school and went to work to support the family. Father had lost sixty pounds in weight and was yellow as saffron and no medicine helped him. Telling a friend about it six months ago, she advised taking Mayr's Wonderful Remedy. I got a bottle and it helped father at once. He was able to go back to work a month later, has regained his weight and strength and eats like a wood chopper."
